

Compliance 360 Selected By U.S. Naval Operational Medicine Institute

Atlanta – May 24, 2004 – Compliance 360, the leader in enterprise compliance management applications, today announced that the Naval Operational Medicine Institute (NOMI) has selected it to manage the organization's Quality Management System functions of process management and business results.

NOMI's unique organizational mission and worldwide customer population, combined with five detachments in 11 locations around the U.S., created a challenge to ensure continual compliance with the Department of Defense, Department of the Navy, Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, various federal regulatory agencies, and accreditation entities.

Karen Shuttlesworth, quality manager, NOMI, said a key factor in selecting Compliance 360 was the solution's adaptability in any type of assessment or audit environment. The Compliance 360 application supports the unique Navy process requirements as well as providing a means to monitor key performance measures of effectiveness.

"Achieving organizational excellence through performance measurement and self-assessment has become a reality," Shuttlesworth said. "It's very important to maintain process stability and compliance to ensure continuous mission readiness at all times. This software product provides the information management solution we needed to automate our Quality Management System."

According to Steve McGraw, president and CEO of Compliance 360, "NOMI's diverse set of requirements for managing compliance activities translates to the need for a flexible, innovative solution – and our product fits the bill perfectly. We are very proud to be able to assist the U.S. Navy in its mission and objectives."
